

10 Reasons To Make a Student an Offer They Can't Refuse!

Being a Fieldwork Educator:

Allows students' to bring new ideas and current thinking to workplace.

Stimulates your clinical reasoning skills.

Develops professional skills, for example time management and priority setting.

Provides opportunity to share expertise with future colleagues.

May reduce your workload.

Creates and improves your links with universities and the national association.

Develops teaching skills

Enhances your reputation within your workplace.

Can enhance your career opportunities.

Can be deeply rewarding
for all those involved.

By Andrew Neale